"Emphasize skills or abilities that relate to the job. Working in a small startup allowed me to get surface-level experience in most digital marketing channels. The way to avoid generalizations and add depth to your motivational letter is by tailoring it to the specific organization and program/position you are applying to:When writing a motivational letter, you want to make sure you know what and where you are applying to. The rule of thumb is if you want to be more factual and to the point, go for the 7-paragraph structure. Novorésumé's motivational letter templates and intuitive editor add the tinge of personality that you'd need to stand out from the rest. So, let's sum up everything we've covered in this post:A motivational letter is a formal letter which you need to write if you're applying for university/college admissions, a non-profit, or a volunteering institution. I have demonstrated _____ because I have _____ especially in _____. It's the best thing for me because _____ I remember once when I _____, which made me realize that I _____ resonates with me because _____.What distinguishes me from my peers is _____.I developed my passion for Online Marketing during my internship at [company name]. I also practice _____ in my professional or working life by _____. Requirement: Minimum 2 years of volunteering experienceI volunteered in Africa for three years. It's one of my most fulfilling experiences because I am passionate about helping others and came out a better person. Mention the general reason on why you're applying, and then deep-dive in the bulk of your motivational letter.And of course, don't forget to mention contact information on top.For example:To: School/Organization NameFirst Name Last Namemymail@gmail.comPhone NumberRelevant Social Media (LinkedIn, Quora, GitHub, etc.)Dear [Name of The Contact Person], My name is [Your name] and I would like to express my interest in applying for the Doctoral program in political science at [University Name]. Wrong! All organizations are looking for people who genuinely want to be there and are excited about what they do. Now, I would like to deep-dive and gain advanced know-how by attending the [university name] program in Digital Marketing.Conclusion: Finally, you can wrap up the motivational letter and send it in. "They're not reading, they're skimming. After reading this letter, the admissions team will feel like they know Jane, and this is what you should also aim to do: communicate who you are through highlighting your story tailored to the institution and program you are applying for.Start Building Your Motivation LetterNow that you know how to write a motivational letter, you can decide on how it looks.A black and white letter sheet with Times New Roman, 12-pt font size might be great for a formal document, but it does not make you stand out in the pile of grey applications.How can you appear professional without being boring? You go back to your open Word doc and you have only managed to write: "This organization seems like fun" or "I'll totally be a great fit". You know you are not this generic or basic. The cover letter is your chance to explain why you're genuinely interested in the company and its mission.No need to make it super formal, either. She is applying for a Ph.D. in the department of Political Science. The general requirements are: being research inclined, a demonstrated passion for Politics, and an above average performance during undergraduate studies. The values of the university are integrity, education, respect, and accountability.She's using the three paragraph structuring method.You can see how Jane highlights through personal stories:That she knows the history of the university and shares the same valuesThat she's genuinely excited and passionate about the program and the schoolWhat her qualifications are and how they'll be a great fit for the programWhat she hopes to achieve if given the opportunity to study at HarvardThe same rules and spirit apply to non-university related motivational letters as well. You can easily notice that Jane has essentially given a personal story of all his qualifications. I've always dreamed of becoming a politician and helping give back to my country, and I believe that a Ph.D. in politics from [University Name] would set me miles ahead to reaching my goal.Body of the Motivational Letter: this is the main bulk of your motivational letter. Smith.Look at the program requirements and the institution's website. Find out the top three requirements for the position and explain how you are the best candidate.Demonstrate that you share the organization's values or are exceptionally qualified through a short story or personal examples. Include their name, title, company and address at the very top below the date.If you don't know who to address, LinkedIn is a great place to start. Consider your case rested and your application denied.I would love to live in [location of organization], because _____. It is my dream to be part of [name of program], because _____.The values [name of institution] is based on are: [three general values stated on their website]. This way, you can use each body paragraph to discuss specific achievements or points.If, on the other hand, you're going for a more story-telling approach, you'd go for the 3 paragraph option, so as not to break the flow of the story.Create My Motivation LetterWhichever structure you go for, it should consist of 3 main parts: the introduction, body, and conclusion. I would do it again in a heartbeat.Requirement: Passionate about researchI would pick a sleepless night conducting research instead of a night out anytime. If you tell a fake story or inflate your excitement or achievements, you will be put into the "lying Pinnochio pile". Simply enter the company name and some keywords into the search bar (e.g., "Google, hiring manager, sales") and a variety of related profiles will appear.Your opening line doesn't need to be anything extravagant. Choosing the same templates, fonts, colors will improve your personal brand and increase your chances of being called for an interview.Suggested Reading: The intent should be your driving motivation! Writing a good motivational letter can be an absolute game-changer. Where?An intro to the bulk of your essay. Don't be so confident that you'll get hired: It's very likely that there are several other qualified candidates competing for that same position.That's where the cover letter comes in. Unconsciously, we inflate feelings and ideas when we lie. Be sure to do this in a confident manner and keep in mind that the reader will also view your letter as an example of your writing skills."Instead of using flowery words and cliché claims like "fast thinker" and "highly creative," go for action words.Here are a few examples of action verbs to use when highlighting specific skills:To demonstrate leadership skills: Accomplished, contracted, assigned, directed, orchestrated, headed, delegatedTo demonstrate communication skills: Addressed, translated, presented, negotiated, moderated, promoted, editedTo demonstrate research skills: Constructed, examined, critique, systematized, investigated, modeled, formulatedTo demonstrate creative skills: Revitalized, redesigned, developed, integrated, conceptualized, fashioned, shapedAvoid using too many "I" statements because it can come off as though you're mostly interested in what you can gain from the company.
